16.VP routinely framed real testimonials about side effects as misinformation, from “true stories” of blood clots from AstraZeneca vaccines to a New York Times story about vaccine recipients who contracted the blood disorder thrombocytopenia.

Concerns about AstraZeneca vaccine as countries suspend batches after some recipients experienced blood clots stories of people experiencing blood clots after receiving the AstraZeneca vaccine prompted multiple governments to temporarily suspend vaccinations. This has drawn attention, including among vaccine-hesitant and anti-vaccine communities. Austrian authorities have suspended inoculations with a batch of AstraZeneca's COVID-19 vaccine as a precaution while investigating the death of one person and the illness of others, neither of which are confirmed to have been caused by vaccination. An influential conservative British media personality Katie Hopkins, who regularly questions vaccine's safety, saw 5000 likes. Public Facebook posts mentioning "Austria, AstraZeneca" saw over 500K interactions last week.

Some countries have only banned a specific batch, such as ABV5300. These countries include Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Austria, Estonia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Latvia, Italy, Senegal, and Thailand.

A tweet from Naomi Wolf, author and conspiracy theorist, was picked up by an Australian lockdown page and was reposted to a Spanish language alternative news channel (5,000+ members) that reaches Latinos in the U.S. The tweet reads "update on countries that have suspended the use of the AstraZeneca vaccine. This event received attention within numerous anti-vax Facebook Groups. The suspension has received widespread global news coverage and therefore saw spread beyond anti-vaccine communities. Foreign state media from Russian and Chinese has also covered these suspensions. Takeaways: The suspensions of AstraZeneca vaccines in European countries are getting significant international coverage. Increased doubts in one manufacturer's vaccine safety has led to a loss of trust in the vaccine overall. We will continue to monitor discussions of suspensions."

Safety concerns about AstraZeneca vaccine as countries suspend batches of the vaccine after some recipients experienced blood clots

- True stories of people experiencing blood clots after receiving the AstraZeneca vaccine have prompted multiple governments to temporarily suspend vaccinations. This has drawn global attention, including among vaccine-hesitant and anti-vaccine communities.
- Austrian authorities have suspended inoculations with a batch of AstraZeneca's COVID-19 vaccine as a precaution while investigating the death of one person and the illness of another after the shots, neither of which are confirmed to have been caused by vaccination. An Instagram post by prominent conservative British media personality Katie Hopkins, who regularly questions the Pfizer vaccine's safety, saw 5000 likes. Public Facebook posts mentioning "Austria, AstraZeneca" saw over 500K interactions last week.
- Some countries have only banned a specific batch, such as ABV5300. These countries include Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Austria, Estonia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Latvia, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Thailand.
- A tweet from Naomi Wolf, author and conspiracy theorist, was picked up by an Australian anti-lockdown page and was reposted to a Spanish language alternative news channel on Telegram (5,000+ members) that reaches Latinos in the U.S. The tweet reads "updated AGAIN" and lists countries that have suspended the use of the AstraZeneca vaccine.
- This event received attention within numerous anti-vax Facebook Groups. The suspensions also received widespread global news coverage and therefore saw spread beyond anti-vaccine communities.
- Foreign state media from Russian and Chinese has also covered these suspensions.
- Takeaways: The suspensions of AstraZeneca vaccines in European countries are getting significant international coverage. Increased doubts in one manufacturer's vaccine may lead to hesitancy about vaccination overall. We will continue to monitor discussions of these suspensions.

Hi Jack and team,

Overall, the weekly reports and real-time escalations provide us with situational awareness regarding emerging trends (even as they implicate other platforms), and with actionable information regarding potential violations on our platform. With regards to Jira reports, in addition to the default escalations you're already providing us, two categories stand out to us as particularly relevant:

- Known repeat offenders on the platform
- Notable content that is not on the Twitter platform

With regard to the weekly reports, the breakdown of the incidents is very helpful in providing context as well as authoritative information to make our assessments. Of the themes and patterns observed by our teams, the following are most interesting for us to continue to track and address:

- Unsubstantiated reports of pregnancy-related injury or death
- Concerns that COVID-19 vaccines are "experimental" or not officially approved
- Misuse of official reporting tools and statistical data to draw false population-level inferences about the safety of vaccines
- Purported links between mRNA COVID-19 vaccines and cancer
- False associations that mRNA vaccines are "gene therapy"
- Potentially misleading theories regarding escape variants
- Campaigns against vaccine passports, inciting fear about mandatory immunizations, and promotion of "vaccine-exemption" cards

Thanks for all your work on this!

Joe

7 Q. Did you ever have any communications with 8 anybody removing speech about the lab leak theory of 9 the origins of the COVID from social media platforms?

10 A. I don't recall ever having any

12 unlike me because I don't get involved in that sort
13 of stuff. Like I said, my association with social

4) But in an internal Twitter report in March 2021, the company revealed "Dr. Anthony Fauci did an account takeover for @WHOCOVIDResponse."

This runs contrary to Fauci's public statements and sworn deposition given on Nov 23, 2022.

- [US] - The White House COVID-19 Task Force hosted a Q&A with three key Covid-19 health experts on February 4.
 - Dr. Anthony Fauci did an account takeover for @WHCOVIDResponse
 - Dr. Rochelle Walensky hosted questions from @CDCDirector
 - Andy Slavitt, White House COVID-19 Response Team Senior Advisor, replied to questions

The experts answered 32 questions from Twitter users. Organically, the Q&A event received over 4 million impressions.

The most engaged Tweet, featuring a photo of Dr. Fauci, received over 461K impressions and over 7K Likes with an 11.76% engagement rate.

The EU uses the same censorship pretext as the U.S. Censorship Industrial Complex: preventing harm. “The companies will have to do more to tackle disinformation, give more protection and choice to users and ensure stronger protection for children or risk fines as much as 6% of their global turnover,” reported Reuters.
